Notice.
Our only eastern agency for the Atlantic cities, is V. B. PALMER'S. His offices are in New York, Tribune Buildings, opposite City Hall.

In Philadelphia, N. W. corner Third and Chesnut. In Baltimore, S. E. corner Baltimore and Calvert st. In Baltimore, S. E. corner Calvert and Calvert st.

A communication from Senator Todd, in relation to the Land Fraud Law, will be published in our next.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser, under date of Feb. 18th, writes that the Oregon speech of Senator Clayton, the leader of the Clay wing of the whig party, "puts the Administration, at least presumptively, in the right." He wrote further—

"A very irritating and unfavorable report upon the question has been produced here, in and out of Congress, by the injudicious mode in which some of the New York and Washington and other Whig papers have treated it, and particularly since the promulgation of the late correspondence.

The politicians here are thin skinned in regard to national subjects, for they stand in dread of the ardent and confident patriotism of the people. When they see that the intelligence and commercial wealth of the country are, as usual, turned against the Administration—against the country, and ultra British in all their tendencies, they are naturally enough driven into extreme opinions and measures on the other side.

I hear, therefore, among prominent and generally moderate men, some very impatient and harsh denunciations of the American matter, which, in fact, has now become as much a matter of ridicule here, as even Mr. Archer's pigs.

This is a thing which ought not to be. If it continues the result will be—extraneous as it may seem—that war will be invoked—not from enmity to England—but from hatred of the commercial interest, which will be the enemy in view."

But the same writer (as we presume) on the next day, 14th, seems to have got alarmed at his own tendency, and beats a retreat, as follows:

"The Atlantic coast, where most of the capital is to be found, is wholly averse to the war for Oregon; and will be clearly of its opinion. One may be got at Mr. Garrison's office. In his speech in the House, to make England pay the expenses of the war, by confiscating, for that purpose, all the British credits in the hands of the states, corporations and individuals in this country.

But it may well be doubted whether the states would be able to pay these sums to the general government, and whether the act itself would not wholly destroy all credit. Mr. Gallatin says that all the loans in the last war were obtained from capitalists in the Atlantic states. But does any one believe that money can be got in that quarter for the Oregon war? As to the West, she has no capital to spare for that purpose. She has not even the essential objects of peace, much less of war. If any money be got at all, it will be at very high rates of interest, and the amount to be raised by forced taxes will, therefore, exceed the sum stated by Mr. Gallatin.

I am glad to see that Mr. Gallatin refers the danger of the war to party sympathies, and warns the country against their influence. I mentioned, in my letter last night, that the fact that the ultra whigs are on both sides of the question have already had the effect greatly to exasperate the parties here—and particularly the Democratic party—which has always assumed to be the exclusive guardian of the public honor, and has, moreover, the public confidence, and, at all events, the control of both of the legislative and executive branches of the government at this time.

The force of party sympathies will ultimately, it is to be feared, defeat a majority of Congress to the support of the ultra views of Mr. Allen—who if he has not prepared the hearts of the American people for war, has, at least, done his best to prepare the hearts of the British people for war."

This is "hot and cold," in a very ludicrous manner. It is evident that the writer is very much afraid of something—but what, he hardly is certain of. As to the "spare capital of the West," we can assure him that we can fight, if necessary, upon an exceedingly small one. The chief article of necessity would be deemed powder and lead. And as to Eastern capitalists, we have as little doubt that, if they could be sure of good interest and ample security, they would furnish ready cash to carry on the war with as much alacrity, as the commercial anti-Oregon men would fit out piratical privateers to prey on British commerce. They worship Money as a god, and would act accordingly.

The Bank Clique.

In our paper of Feb. 21, we published a short paragraph, warning the people of rumors prevalent that a certain clique in this town, were arranging matters so as to secure the nomination, for members of the next General Assembly, of their own particular and special friends; and urging the people to take the matter into their own hands, require fair play and honest dealing.

The coat fitted so nicely, that the editor of the Bank organ could not help putting it on and declaring it to have been made expressly for him.

As an offset he has among other things, which we have not now time to notice, the following:

"One of the editors of the Sentinel has been indiscreet enough to avow the motive which governs him in the selection of candidates for the legislature in Marion county. He has stated that if a candidate would pledge himself to vote for them (the Chapmans) for State Printer next winter, he would turn out and 'bush kick' it and electioneer for him. This we stand ready to prove, and Chapman cannot deny it without a direct violation of truth."

Now notwithstanding the positive appearance of the last sentence, uttered no doubt, in such a shape in order to deter us from a denial which could not but have been anticipated, we most positively deny the imputation in full, deny the pretended proof, and pronounce the whole a tissue of unqualified falsehood. Let the utterer of the slander now bring out his pretended proof, or rather the lie as his own.

THE WEATHER.—Our "oldest residents" say that they never knew so cold and cold a winter, and one with so much snow as the present has been. We have not seen so much snow during several past years as now covers the ground. All sorts of indelible things are put in use as sledges. It is regular-built New England weather—clear, cold and bright.

Don't fail to read the foreign news in another column. It is of the utmost interest to the West especially, and shows most conclusively the wisdom of the ground maintained by the democratic party on the question of the tariff.

The Washington Union, speaking of the various statements in relation to the probable immediate adjustment of the Oregon question, through the medium of a Commercial Treaty, &c., some of which we have copied, says:—

"We are sure it is unnecessary to say that these political gossips must know more of what is going forward than the diplomatists who are themselves behind the curtain. For our own part, we are not disposed of anything about negotiations, or terms proposed, much less a treaty concluded."

Notwithstanding this, we still remain of the opinion formerly expressed by us, that an attempt will be made to compromise the difficulty, by giving Great Britain all Oregon north of the 49th degree. WE SHALL LOSE OREGON BY THE TREACHERY OF THE SOUTH.

JOSEPH Q. ADAMS alone, of the Massachusetts delegation, and almost alone of the New England Whig delegation, voted for the Oregon treaty. The six democratic representatives of South Carolina, and as many from Virginia, voted in the negative, all the sixteen democratic votes in opposition coming from the South.

Counterfeiters Arrested.

James Brown, for many years has been at the head of one of the most extensive gangs of counterfeiters in the West, was recently arrested at his residence in Summit county, Ohio. Several years ago, when the United States Bank was in successful operation, and its notes were in good credit throughout the commercial world, Brown and his brother Daniel got up large quantities of well executed paper on that bank, and proceeded New Orleans for the purpose of sending it to foreign ports; but their secret was discovered by the arrangement was perfected, and the Browns were arrested and thrown into prison.

Daniel Brown died in prison before his trial, and James Brown in some way procured his release by turning state's evidence. The death of Daniel Brown, who was the more accomplished villain of the two, and the heavy pecuniary expenses attending the arrest and escape of James Brown, deprived him of very much of his ability to do mischief; still he has ever since, no doubt, been engaged in counterfeiting, interrupted occasionally by the arrest and conviction of some of his associates and coadjutors and by his own arrest and confinement. He always, however, contrived to escape the punishment due to his offences, until he seemed to think himself above and beyond the reach of law. Emboldened by his success in eluding justice, he appears to have embarked more extensively and openly in the counterfeit business than usual, during the past summer and fall. The coin consisted of Mexican dollars, U. S. half dollars, quarter eagles and sovereigns, and the paper was principally upon the banks in New York. Brown was held to bail in $30,000. His wife and daughter attended him before the commissioner—the latter of whom is a young lady of fine accomplishments and great spirit. Brown was betrayed by one of his own pupils.

James and Daniel Brown formerly resided, we believe at Lawrenceburg, Indiana, and were considered generally as "wealthy and respectable," till their unfortunate speculation at New Orleans.

Two counterfeiters were recently arrested in New York city, and thirty thousand dollars of counterfeit bills taken possession of by the police.

Immense numbers of counterfeit Mexican dollars are being put into circulation in New Orleans. They come from Texas and are well calculated to deceive.

THE UNITED STATES BANK.—Commenting upon a statement that the stock of the U. S. Bank having got into the hands of English Bankers, and that they have in contemplation to renege the debt of the bank, the Philadelphia Ledger says:

"The charter of the Bank is whole and sound as ever it was. It makes its regular statements to the Auditor General, holds its annual elections of officers, and does every other thing that a bank in credit does, saving and excepting the payment of its debts. But in this last particular it is better than many other institutions of the State; for, though it does not pay what it owes, it runs no more in debt, being out of credit. When the U. S. Bank stopped payment, application was made to the Legislature, and an act, authorizing a special assignment, was obtained, and thus the charter was saved."

BANK BRIBERY.—An agent of the Lehigh County Bank was recently exposed in an attempt to bribe certain members of the Legislature of Pennsylvania. The Bank's affairs were undergoing examination before a committee, and the agent wanted a favorable report. The price he offered was $500 apiece for the friendship of a sufficient number of the committee. One of them "drawed him up," got $400, and then exposed him. Many a thing of this kind has been done which never was exposed. The agent whose name was McCook, called himself a Bank Democrat!!!

It is stated that nearly the entire capital of the Manufacturer's and Mechanic's Bank of Nantucket, Mass., has recently disappeared in an unaccountable manner. Consequently its credit has gone in Boston, notwithstanding "banks are strongest when they have the least specie," if bank men are to be believed.

VIRGINIA.—The bill providing for holding a State Convention to amend the Constitution of Virginia, has been defeated in the House of Delegates, by a vote of 55 to 40. This vote, says the Enquirer, demonstrates that eastern Virginia will never consent to surrender the vital principle of population and taxation combined. The whole matter has now been wrecked upon the question of representation, and it is evident that so long as the West hold out for their exclusive demands, the East firmly maintaining a principle of such vital consequence to itself, no Convention can be called, to remedy the numerous defects of the Constitution.

GOING TO STRENGTH.—The Boston Post says:—At the late annual meeting of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, it was resolved that the only path to the accomplishment of the objects of the society was "OVER THE RUINS OF THE PRESENT AMERICAN CHURCH AND THE PRESENT AMERICAN UNION."

MORE REVOLUTION IN MEXICO.—An arrival at New Orleans from Texas brings a rumor that Chihuahua and some adjoining States have declared their independence of the Mexican government, and were determined to maintain a separate confederacy.

THE GRAND JURY OF CAYUGA COUNTY, N. Y. have found true bills of indictment against Hiram Rathbun, principal keeper of the Auburn State Prison, and Melancthon W. Cary, assistant keeper of said Prison, for man-slaughter, in the case of the whipped convict Plumb.

THE LAW OFFICERS OF NEW ORLEANS are determined to prosecute to the utmost the parties engaged in the late duel. Two years ago this would have met with condemnation by the public, but now, so great is the change of feeling on this subject, there is a great desire to suppress duelling altogether.

Ellen Langdon, an Irish widow was recently burned to death at Madison, while intoxicated, by her clothes taking fire. She left three children to the cruel tender mercies of this wicked world.

The Horse Case—Identity.
John Musgrave vs. William Martin.
Marion Circuit Court, Indiana—Prover and Conversion.

This case has been tried, and like the first trial, has resulted in a verdict against the plaintiff. The facts proved show the uncertainty of human testimony, and the great caution with which such testimony as to the identity of animals, should be received by juries, in judicial proceedings. The matter in controversy in this case was a large dark bay gelding, with his right eye blind, one hip a little off, white in his forehead the size of a half dollar in the shape of a half moon, a mark on a cut between his felloe and hoof on his left hind leg; a lump on his forehead just over the half moon, a scratch on his hip, as if made by a nail, a hard trotter, and a niggling rack, spirited in harness, carried his head high, frequently tossing it in the air. Such was substantially the description of the animal claimed by both plaintiff and defendant, and the question submitted to the jury was, whether this animal belonged to the plaintiff or to the defendant, claiming title through different channels, it being clear that if either had ever owned him, the other had no title to him.

The plaintiff proved by a number of witnesses whose credibility could not be questioned, that the animal belonged to him; each witness had owned him, and described all his marks, both natural and artificial, before they saw him in the possession of plaintiff; one proved that he hit the animal on the forehead and made the lump with his whip; another, that the animal had run away with the plow and cut his leg between the felloe and hoof, and had scratched his hip with a nail, and all that had owned him identified him, positively; as did many of the neighbors who had seen him in plaintiff's possession up to the time he was stolen from his stable. The plaintiff here rested, and who could have doubted the result? But as if to show the uncertainty of human affairs and the liability of the best men and most positive witnesses to be mistaken, the defendant called up and introduced a number of witnesses of equal credibility who testified that this identical horse was his, tracing the animal from a colt, and proving conclusively that he had never been in the possession of the plaintiff. The witnesses, like those of the plaintiff had described his gait, carriage, natural and artificial marks, before they had seen him in the possession of the present owner; one stated that he struck the animal in the forehead with the bridle bit, and made the lump there; another, that the animal got his foot over the line and cut his felloe; and still another, that he was ploughing him and his hip was scratched by a sharp edge of a stump—all testifying to the eye being out, and the other marks; and the only discrepancy in the description as given by all the witnesses on either side, was that some of plaintiff's witnesses testified that plaintiff's horse was twelve years old last spring, and some of defendant's witnesses testified that defendant's horse was only nine years old at that time.

It was proved, however, that defendant had his horse in possession before plaintiff lost his. This evidence, no doubt, thrown into the scale of defendant, and not the evidence of identity, caused the scale of plaintiff to kick the beam, and a verdict was returned accordingly. This was a case where the interest of the parties brought out the evidence fully on both sides; but had a poor prisoner been indicted for stealing Musgrave's horse, and been found in a strange land in possession of Martin's horse, we betide him, if met by the testimony of Musgrave, as to identity. Such is the great uncertainty of human testimony.
